

To Whom it may concern;I am a XM subscriber and a Over the Road truck driver. I find the weather and traffic information broadcast on XM to be beyond value. It is immediate, current and always available.

When I drive into one of the cities covered by this service, I do not want to a) find a local station that will give the information I need, b) listen to unwelcome programming while I wait for the weather/traffic and c) hope I can hold the station long enough to actually receive the information.

This information is broadcast on a paid subscription service and it is very much part of the service I knew I was paying for. It is vital to my industry, not to mention my safety on the road. If the am/fm stations are so concerned about this, perhaps they shoould persue a way to join the XM broadcasts.

Please leave my XM alone. XM offers an excellent product at a fair price and provides that product with skill and professionalism.
